The Background

Money Sphere spoke with a large modular buildings fabricator with over 20 years of experience in the industry. The client specialises in the design and manufacture of bespoke modular buildings. They provide a turnkey package and manufacture high quality modular buildings to suit a client's requirements with its in-house design service. They also offer its expertise in the refurbishment of old modular buildings, with on or off-site refurbishment available depending on the size of the building.

The Solution?

Having identified several key areas of the business which qualified for R&D we were able to to pin point every area of their operation which could amount to a sizeable return. Working with the client we helped the company claim back £100K worth of corporation tax savings across the 2 financial years. This business were just one of many who had never previously claimed and were delighted with the cash injection back into their business. We ensured that the company benefited from an advanced understanding of how to track and apply their innovation efforts to support the company's financial planning and performance. Money Sphere found that the company is regularly forced to overcome the technological uncertainties of fabricating previously unseen engineering solutions and complex modular systems.

The Result?

- The company has been able to experiment with more nonstandard materials to further its industry expertise.
- The company have subsequently invested in its people, undertaking more staff, and up-skilling its human capital to enable them to undertake more complex and sophisticated projects, outside the capabilities of its competitors.
- The company was able to further invest in the design and develop of custom modular buildings. These include temporary, portable construction buildings, modular prefabricated classrooms, open plan office buildings that combine cost-effective solutions with efficient build times, and buildings for local councils.
